Magna-Tech's electronic method of altering sound tracks makes "looping" obsolete.

If you are still making hundreds of loops for a single feature, then consider a fast, precise and economical method of altering sound tracks that makes "looping" obsolete.

The new Magna-Tech system electronically synchronizes a reel of picture with a reel of full-coat magnetic sound-recording film. Footage and frame "PRESETS" permit the recordist to select the scene to be "dubbed" and to fully control the advance and return of the film as the actor voices the line to be "dubbed."

The system is so accurate it will even permit the change of a single word without danger of erasing an adjacent word.

High speed return of the film to "start" saves time and permits new starts without waiting for a "loop" to complete its trip.

Actors, who so often succumb to the rhythm of a loop, are spared this hypnotic interference. Acceptable "takes" can be stored on the 3-track film and replayed for final selection.

A complete remote control system is provided the director so that, once the recording engineer has preset footages, the director can take over if he wishes and directly control every facet of the recording.

The Electronic Looping System precludes the need for cutting loops and eliminates the need for editing of the track. Complete reels of the motion picture are run in synchronization with the full-coat magnetic film on which the sound track is recorded. Transfer of the best takes is then made to the third track of the same recorder.

This track now has all of the final takes in sequential position and ultimately permits the screening of the picture and the final edited track in perfect synchronization. From this point the track is ready to go to a mix and no further editing is required.

To process Kodak films best, there's nothing like a package from home.

It's only natural. The Kodak films you're using are the finest we can produce. One important reason is endless testing during manufacture. Of course, we use Kodak chemicals to test our films. We call this "Match-Testing" because the films are matched to the chemicals and vice versa. So if you use Kodak packaged chemicals when you process black-and-white, ME-4 or ECO-2 color, or black-and-white reversal, you can be sure you're getting the finest processing.

"Match-Testing" is actually the final test for our packaged chemicals.

There are many more before that. We test the initial ingredients, the mixed ingredients, and the finished chemical. We even test the packaging, so it comes to you in the best condition. When you get the chemical, it's so right that you don't even need a lab chemist.

To make it easier to get the Kodak packaged chemicals you need, we now have a direct "One-Stop Shopping Service" for chemicals. Kodak warehouses throughout the country provide speedy delivery of the packaged chemicals you order.

We top everything off with extensive and readily available technical resources. In short, we like to do everything we can to make sure our films grow up into great movies.

Would the Kodak "One-Stop Shopping Service" for chemicals benefit you? Talk to your Kodak Sales and Engineering Representative about it, or call the nearest Kodak office listed below.
